Meeting of the minds

James Hetherington

THESE Walford students have some of the best minds in the country.

Last month, Walford Anglican School for Girls took three teams to Sydney to compete in Tournament of Minds and finished second in the secondary language literature and social sciences sections.

The competition includes teams from every state and territory as well as teams from Hong Kong, Thailand and New Zealand.

The success also maintains the Hyde Park school's status as the most decorated side in the competition.

Martina Theodorakakos, 12, Rory Balding, 14, and Harriet Hewitson, 16, all competed and say the best part was meeting the other competitors.

"It was so interesting to see how they approached their problems compared to what we did," Rory says.

Year 7 student Martina liked meeting girls from other year levels.

"For me it was great to mix with girls from other year levels and really form a strong connection with them," Martina says.

Team organiser Yvonne Colsey said: "It really speaks highly of the work the girls put in, they deserve it."
